

MAUGHAN SPANNED CONTINENT IN LESS THAN DAY

Democrats Open "Shouting" Convention

KEYNOTE WAS DELIVERED BY SEN. HARRISON

Delegates Cheered at Every Opportunity During Session.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Madison Square Garden, New York, June 24.—Rolling along on a great wave of enthusiasm the democratic national convention at one brief session today gave itself over to cheers for the party and roaring approval of Temporary Chairman Pat Harrison's lambasting of the Harding-Coolidge administration.

Cheers for Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland rose in a growing crescendo until Chairman Harrison mentioned the name of Woodrow Wilson. That was the signal for the first demonstration and everybody went to it regardless of sympathy for Smith or McAdoo. It was nearly a half hour before the great audience was quieted and Chairman Harrison went back to his keynote address.

The delivery of the keynote address was the principal part of today's business. The remainder of the proceedings was perfunctory and connected with the organization machinery.

Until the convention reassembles at 11 a. m. tomorrow, various committees will continue their work.

Thirteen thousand party wheelbarrows, delegates and spectators packed Madison Square Garden to see the curtain rise on the first act of the great drama—a stupendous production with an all star cast, many supernumeraries and an indefinite number of scenes.

For a few brief hours there was a lull in the coralling of delegates and the claims of the campaign managers while all assembled to hear Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, the temporary chairman, sound the clarion call of the party keynote and let the convention accomplish some of the necessary routine preliminaries.

Many Couldn't Get In
Probably a third as many people got in for the first session as hoped to. A good many who expected seats stood up and meantime leaders on all sides disclaimed there had been any funny business about distribution of tickets or that the great hall was being packed for anybody.

A long list of notables in party achievements had places of honor on the platform, and in the guests' place in the great arena and in the galleries were thousands to whom the sultry heat of mid-day in June meant nothing so long as they held coveted places to see the great show.

Police Lines Drawn
Police lines were established to keep back throngs who had no tickets. The lucky ones with the scarce tickets were ushered through the ropes which began three blocks away.

Today's session, a comparatively brief one, was surcharged with the intense feelings built up in the pre-convention campaign.

With Smith and McAdoo managers both claiming steady gains and the second choice candidates waiting patiently for the moment when they are confident both leaders will wear themselves out, all the forces awaited the opening gun.

Delegates and guests, anxious to miss nothing, were early in assembling. A half hour before the opening bang of the gavel many of the seats on the floor were occupied and the aisles were crowded with delegates.

The galleries were dotted with early arrivals.

Lights Were Tried Out
At 11:30 the lighting effects were tried out, three chandeliers, each twenty feet across, throwing the convention floor into bright relief.

The lighting effects brought out plainly the four portraits of past party leaders which were hung over the four corners of the central section where the platform and the seats of the delegates were located. Jackson and Cleveland faced each other across the delegate arena, while pictures of Jefferson and Wilson hung above opposite ends of the platform.

The platform was arranged along the north side raised more than ten feet above the convention floor itself. New unfinished kitchen chairs were arranged for the delegates beneath the high raised standards of the states which themselves stood on a level with the high floor of the platform.

Band Almost Unheard
While the delegates came in a constantly increasing buzz of conversation almost drowned out music furnished by a band.

Missouri and Iowa had the places of honor on the floor, with their delegates.

Newsy Notes of Democrats Told by A. P. Writers

By Associated Press Leased Wire
New York, June 24.—Souvenirs for friends are being distributed by the principal campaign headquarters. Razors wait at the offices of Governor Alfred E. Smith. A friend of the candidate said:

"Does that mean a close shave for you, Governor?"

"No," retorted Mr. Smith, "it indicates safety for us."

Twelve hundred policemen were assigned today to the Madison Square Garden zone for the protection and guidance of convention delegates and visitors. A special detail of 320 policemen and 50 plain clothes men also have been added to the regular forces in the Times Square section.

Mrs. Inez Knight Allen, one of Utah's delegates-at-large to the democratic convention, doesn't agree with her husband, R. E. Allen of Provo, on politics. Two weeks ago he was in Cleveland as a delegate to the republican convention.

Arrangements for broadcasting the proceedings of the convention as arranged by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company and the Radio Corporation of America, are expected to make the big show available to 50,000,000 people.

LARGE STILL IS FOUND IN PINE CREEK TOWNSHIP

Tip Furnished By Lee Co. Officials Brings Raid on Burns Farm.

(Telegraph Special Service)
Oregon—Sheriff Sherd Dodson and a force of deputies seized one of the largest illicit stills that has been found in Ogle county late yesterday afternoon when, acting upon a tip furnished by Lee county authorities, they raided the farm home of Jacob Burns in Pine Creek township. A 60-gallon still was operating in full blast, it is alleged, the largest still that has been seized in this county. Several gallons of finished product, barrels of mash and a store of supplies said to have been used in making the liquor were taken.

Burns, who was a former resident of Dixon, is confined in the county jail here, his wife and several small children, having been released from custody and have gone to Dixon. The information furnished Sheriff Dodson from Lee county authorities was that reports had been received that much of the product from the Burns distillery was being furnished in that county.

Gyros Meet this Evening.

The Dixon Gyro club will meet this evening at 8 o'clock at the Nachusa Tavern for their regular weekly luncheon and business session. Robert Haltenberg, director of public relations of the Illinois Northern Utilities company will address the club on the subject, "Intelligent Self Interest."

"Paul Revere, Not a Sphinx" Needed in White House Says Pat Harrison in Keynote Address at Opening of Democratic Convention in New York City Today

By Associated Press Leased Wire
New York, June 24.—America needs a Paul Revere "not a sphinx," in the White House, to call it back to duty and high resolve, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, declared today in sounding the keynote at the Democratic National Convention.

In an address condemning the Republican administration—its policies, both domestic and foreign—the temporary chairman called on Democrats everywhere, "with victory within their grasp," to unite against a common enemy.

"Oh, for one in the White House," he said, "whose heart might be galvanized and courage aroused to sympathize and fight. Would that we once more might see in that exalted position one with the courage of a Jackson, the militant honesty of a Cleveland, the matchless statesmanship and the fine fighting qualities of a Woodrow Wilson."

Senator Harrison ran the gamut of the Harding-Coolidge administration in a series of biting criticisms. A large part of his speech was taken up with a resume of the disclosures of senate investigating committees. The oil policies, in particular, came in for vigorous denunciation.

Holds Up Oil Probe
"Show this administration an oil well," he said, "and it will show you a foreign policy."

"America has taken the measure of this administration," he continued. "It might have been able to free itself from the sectional idolatry and to have looked beyond the skies of New England. It might have heard the groans of the distressed farmers of the west and sympathetically repented and removed the tariff jams in the channels through which our surplus products move. It might have visualized world conditions and courageously assumed the part befitting a great nation. It might have reduced living costs, redeemed pledges to the soldier, followed a definite domestic program, and adopted a broad and statesmanlike foreign policy. But, even then, it would have availed it nothing with its carnival of corruption."

Compare Administrations
Comparing the investigations into Democratic and Republican administrations, Senator Harrison said it was "Not graft alone that offers in the two administrations such happy comparisons."

"During these little more than three years," he said, "we have seen the present administration float along, tossed by every current, fanned by every breeze, without purpose, program or policy. Upon a thousand issues they have hoisted the white flag of surrender."

Senator Harrison declared that nothing in "burlesque or opera bouffe" was comparable to the "scene recently enacted at Cleveland in the efforts of the Silent Sphinx of the Potomac to exile and expatriate those Republican Senators who dared to oppose his mandate."

"They dared to vote an investigation of a number of the President's official family and they are penalized for their decency," he said.

"By every device known to trained camoufleurs, by every subtle process of legerdemain, the Republican nominee, in true pharisaical fashion, sought to divorce himself from his former comrades in arms. The plan is obvious; the plot is futile. Neither headed by General Butler and Sergeant Stearns can conceal the ugly fact that the Cleveland convention was the most highly organized, boss-ridden and oleaginous ever held in America. The American people will not be deceived."

Butler, Stearns and Slomp
"The American people will know they are dealing with a system; that even though Hanna, Quay and Penrose are dead, their spirits go marching on in the personages of three musketeers of present day republicanism—Butler, Stearns and Slomp."

Turning to a discussion of the Mellon tax proposal, Senator Harrison asserted that it was conceived in the interest of privilege.

"What is this Mellon that Mellon sought to cut?" he asked. "It would have given 1,200 of the 3,585,985 income tax payers in America 51 per cent of the total reduction."

The temporary chairman declared under the leadership of Simmons in the Senate and Garner in the House, the democratic tax reduction proposal triumphed, "not because we were numerically strong, but because we were assuredly right."

Comparing the foreign policies of the American government under President Wilson and the Harding-Coolidge administration, Senator Harrison declared that the Wilson policy was "definite, wise and brave; the other vacillating, halting and weak."

"It is the difference," he said, "between a keynote and a psychologic policy of statesmanship."

Commended Harding
Commending President Harding for his proposal that America adhere to the World Court, Senator Harrison said that President Coolidge had pledged himself to carry out Mr. Harding's policies and that yet from the day he assumed office he made "only a bow" in that direction.

Senator Harrison declared that if returned to control of the government the Democratic Party would have "neither pets nor puppets to protect or corrupt cabinet members to coddle."

"We will rigidly enforce the law," he said, "whether the violator be a bloated trust magnate, a congressional bribe taker, an embezzler of the public domain, or a disreputable boot-legger."

"We will read just tariff rates and reduce transportation charges."

"We will lay bare campaign bribery and punish election frauds."

"We will go to the relief of distressed agriculture and adopt such policies and pass such laws and restore permanently the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar."

"We will adopt a progressive reclamation policy."

"We will pursue the same high course that has ever inspired the leaders of Democracy, untrifled by those who threatened to desert, unmoved by those who seek selfishly to control."

Neither the cries of radicalism nor the threats of conservatism will swerve us from our fixed purpose. Democracy is the right way. It is the party that offers the safe middle course, patronizing no 'isms' and paying tribute to no extremes."

Hits Former Officials

Referring to senate inquiries, Senator Harrison was unsparing in his criticisms of former secretaries Denby and Fall; former Attorney General Daugherty; Charles R. Forbes, former head of the Veterans' Bureau and former Senator Newberry, of Michigan. He paid high tribute to Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, prosecutor of the oil inquiry and others connected with the various investigations.

"Decry them as they will, the American people know that it was these investigations conducted by Democrats, but through Republican connivance—that sent Albert R. Fall to Three Rivers a disgraced man. It was these investigations that compelled Edwin Denby's retirement from the cabinet. It was these investigations that drove Daugherty back to Washington Court House. It was these investigations that caused conspirators against their government to take their own lives rather than tell the truth. It was these investigations that pointed to the immoral orgy of Forbes and sickening scandal in the Veterans' Bureau. It was these investigations that put a Republican congressman behind bars and dashed Newberry from the senate. It was these investigations that informed the American public that the first official act of Calvin Coolidge was the appointment of a private secretary who had traded and trafficked in public patronage. It was these investigations that led a republican senate to convict its own Republican National Committee for framing a Democratic senator because he dared to do the right."

Comparing the investigations into Democratic and Republican administrations, Senator Harrison said it was "Not graft alone that offers in the two administrations such happy comparisons."

"During these little more than three years," he said, "we have seen the present administration float along, tossed by every current, fanned by every breeze, without purpose, program or policy. Upon a thousand issues they have hoisted the white flag of surrender."

FOUGHT WIND, NAUSEA AS HE MADE RECORD

From New York to San Francisco in 21 Hrs., 47 Min., 45 Seconds

San Francisco, Calif., June 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Lieut. Russell L. Maughan wrote a new and spectacular chapter in the history of man's conquest of the air yesterday when he spanned the North American continent in less than a day.

The flight was his third attempt. He left Mitchell Field, New York at 2:59 1/2 a. m. (Eastern Standard time), halted briefly at five refueling stations, fought fatigue and constantly recurring nausea for 21 hours, 47 minutes, 45 seconds and arrived at Crissy Field, San Francisco, at 9:47:15 o'clock (P. M. city time) last night.

Given Ovation in Erie.

Worn and nervous, the courageous trail blazer was engulfed in a cheering mass of humanity which extended to him an almost unparalleled ovation upon his arrival.

"Gee, but its good to be here," he said as comrades of the air service lifted him from the cockpit of his plane. "I am tired, but happy."

Lieut. Maughan soared away from Mitchell Field undaunted by prospects of none too favorable weather.

Encountered Rough Weather.

From the start he encountered rough weather. A dense fog over Upper New York enveloped him. East of Pittsburgh he ran into a severe rain and wind storm. Clinging to the "stick" of his powerful P. W. S. army pursuit biplane, however, he forged ahead and surmounted the first perilous obstacle in his path—the looming range of the Alleghenies.

The first lap of the trip—from New York to Dayton, 570 miles—was covered in four hours, seven minutes.

Lieut. Maughan's next stop was at St. Joseph, Mo. He arrived without mishap at 10:32 a. m. (Central time) however, completing the 570-mile lap in three hours, 11 minutes.

Taken Ill Near Cheyenne.

At North Platte, Neb., his next stop where he arrived at 1:34 p. m. (Central time) he remained 23 minutes.

First evidences of Lieut. Maughan's illness became apparent at Cheyenne, where he arrived at 2:17 p. m. (Mountain time).

Taking off at 2:46 p. m., he faced courageously and smilingly the portion of his trip conceded to hold the greatest peril.

But the leap over the Great Divide was made without mishap and he landed at Silduro, Utah, at 5:20 p. m. (Pacific time). Thirty-one minutes later he was off on the last leg of the journey.

Darkness enshrouded San Francisco as Lieut. Maughan appeared. The flier circled the field twice and shot downward in a perfect landing. The surging crowd swarmed around the plane. Lieut. Maughan was borne aloft by cheering thousands amid a deafening ovation. There he recounted briefly the story of his difficult voyage.

150 Miles an Hour.

He flew at an average speed of 150 miles an hour he said.

"I was mighty glad to see the lights of Crissy Field," he commented.

"I bucked headwinds for two-thirds of the way and the rest of the way I bucked a heavy crosswind."

Lieut. Maughan went to the home of Lieut. Colonel William E. Gillespie, in charge of the air force at Crissy Field, where he will be a guest for several days.

Has Fine War Record.

Lieut. Maughan was born in Logan, Utah, educated at the Utah Agricultural College and trained in aviation after he entered the army in 1917. He won his first lieutenant in June, 1920. During the war he won the distinguished Service Cross by accounting for four enemy planes in a single combat. He also is former holder of the world's high speed airplane record. He has been stationed at McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio, for a year and a half.

Lieut. Maughan elapsed 34 minutes, 15 seconds off his original estimate of the elapsed time which would be consumed in the voyage. He had estimated it would require 22 hours, 19 minutes. His time of arrival had been scheduled at 2:22 a. m. after a take-off at 2:22 a. m. He was only six minutes late—the "swiftest messenger of all time."

Premier of So. Africa.

Pretoria, Union of South Africa, June 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—General James Barry Hertzog, leader of the victorious parties in the recent elections today accepted the premiership of South Africa, succeeding General Jan Christian Smuts.

On Three Weeks' Trip.

Dr. Willard Thompson of this city, who, with Mrs. Thompson, leaves Friday on an eastern trip, will be back in his office on Monday, July 21.

KEYNOTE WAS DELIVERED BY SEN. HARRISON

gations seated in the front row on the left and right of the center aisle. Senator Walsh, Montana, oil committee chairman of the convention, came in early and took his seat under the Montana standard. John W. Davis, whose friends think he may emerge victor from the candidatorial tug of war, appeared on the platform, chatting with Josephus Daniels and Senator Fletcher, Florida. His presence apparently passed unnoticed by the delegates.

Bryan Got First Applause

Chairman Hull of the national committee reached the platform a few minutes before noon. Manifestly he still was weak from the effects of the collapse he suffered several days ago and was assisted through the crowd to the chair. A minute later Senator Harrison, ready to make his keynote address, joined the group on the platform and at about the same time William Jennings Bryan appeared on the floor to take his seat as a member of the Florida delegation. The Great Commoner, three times the standard bearer of his party, got the first applause of the convention. It was a short burst of handclapping by those about him on the floor. He beamed on everybody.

Just at noon, the band played "Home in Pasadena," doubtless for the benefit of the McAdoo delegates and then swung into "What'll We Do." The delegate section was almost filled. Convention officials showed no indication of calling for order.

Carter Glass Cheered

A few minutes after 12, Senator Carter Glass, also mentioned as a possible dark horse selection for the presidency came to the convention floor and was given a rousing reception. Mrs. William G. McAdoo, a daughter of Woodrow Wilson, took a seat in a box directly opposite the speaker's platform.

Sergeants at arms assisted by police officers began circulating through the aisles at 12:15, endeavoring to persuade the delegates to take their seats. The show was about ready to start.

It grew increasingly hot in the hall as the sun burst through the clouds and beat down on the glass roof. During the final wait of a few minutes, the box occupied by Mrs. McAdoo in a place of prominence closely overhanging the delegates' arena at the rear of the short center aisle, attracted much attention among the delegates.

Opening Was Delayed

The actual opening of the session was delayed after all the delegates had arrived in order to permit the police to straighten out a traffic crush about the Garden and through the many guests who were trying to get to their seats. Considerable confusion persisted also on the floor where there seemed to be an unusual crush of people who had no seats allotted to them.

Delegates and spectators grew impatient and the partisans of several of the presidential candidates took advantage of the general confusion to stage impromptu demonstrations for their favorites. One western delegation from the west gave three cheers for McAdoo and another group from the east joined in a South campaign song. It was 12:43 when the bang of the gavel called for order. At first the delegates only cheered to vent their enthusiasm at the prospect for action. Standing in the full glare of the concentrated fire of the spot lights, however, Chairman Hull soon secured quiet and introduced Cardinal Hayes to make the opening prayer.

The delegates arose and cheered the prelate and then stood quiet and with bowed heads as the cardinal offered his prayer. It was a solid mass of standing humanity, for the aisles were as crowded as the sections allotted to delegates.

Shower of Tiny Flags

The invocation concluded, the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner" and showers of tiny American flags which had been concealed in folds of the ceiling decorations were loosened and showered down like many colored leaves outside the convention floor.

When the band had gone through one stanza of the national anthem, Anna Case, Metropolitan Opera star, sang a verse of the song, while the delegates remained standing. She invited the assembled thousands to join her when she reached the chorus and they did so in a great swelling burst of melody that ended with a crash of cheering and handclapping.

Then the convention went through the usual performance of having its official picture taken. The reading of the official call for the convention by Charles A. Grothouse, of Indiana, secretary of the national committee followed the taking of the official picture.

The formal announcement that Senator Harrison had been selected for temporary chairman got a cheer

WILL M. CRESSY at the DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

By WILL M. CRESSY
Illustrated by George Storm

Got a lot of new entries in our National Democratic Swap-stakes this morning. I did not know there were so many Democrats in America. But then I formed my opinion from the last presidential election.

This morning, as added starters, we have: Four governors, Donahoe of Ohio (not Doheny, the oil philanthropist), Parker of Louisiana, Davis of Kansas (which used to be prohibitory), and Ritchie of Maryland (who will have a short walk if he loses).

Then we also have Walsh & Wheeler of Montana, the Investigating Brothers, Homer Cummings, who piloted Wilson to Victory, but will need a better pilot than Wilson had. Carter Glass of Virginia, with a name that would make it a mighty delicate job for him to throw out the present attorney general, STONE. John J. Davis, who was sentenced by Wilson to serve a term as Ambassador to England, but was pardoned out by Harding. Pat Neff of Texas, who has got a ninety-mile boulevard down there named for him, so would have a good place to strike hard going before he got to Washington. Ralston of Indiana, whose record seems from the convention floor and galleries. There was frequent applause also as the names of the other temporary officers were read off. The women delegates held up a battering of handclapping as the names of many women were read among those selected by the national committee to serve in conspicuous places in the convention.

To be shouting convention. It was apparent that it was to be a shouting convention from the very start. Everyone seemed to be in good humor despite the bitter pre-convention rows and the impending battle over conditions and party measures.

When the reading of the roll of temporary officers had been completed, former Governor Campbell of Ohio moved that the list be approved and the motion was adopted.

Mr. Hull appointed a committee to escort Senator Harrison to the stand from his place in the Mississippi delegation.

Senator Harrison got a rousing welcome as he appeared. The stand struck up a lively air as the cheering continued. Then Chairman Hull, in a single sentence, introduced Senator Harrison, turned the gavel over to him and retired.

Jibes Were Cheered

Senator Harrison's jibes at the Mellon tax plan and the Fordney-McCumber tariff act were greeted by repeated shouts of approbation and cheering when the temporary chairman declared that the arrangements agreements were held in spite of the republican party and insistent demands of "Bill Borah of Idaho, who refused to bind himself in the holy bonds of republican wedlock to Cleveland." It was a reference to the Idaho's senators refusal to run for vice president on the republican ticket.

There was a whoop from Montana, seconded from other delegations when the senator charged that the republican national committee had framed a democratic senator because he dared to do right.

Roars of laughter swept the hall as the temporary chairman described in sarcastic vein that he said transpired at the Cleveland convention and ironically eulogized the work of "Butler and Slemm, the two republican musketeers" and Frank Mondell, the permanent chairman at Cleveland and a "lame duck fittingly selected to typify the work of the convention."

"Democrats Not Discredited" The convention was brought to its feet cheering as Senator Harrison declared that in the whole course of the senate investigations not a single incident was disclosed "that would discredit a single democrat."

"That's the boy, Pat," yelled a delegate amid cheers, when the speaker assailed Henry Cabot Lodge for his part in defeating the treaty of Versailles and there were cries of "good," "good" and another prolonged wave of cheering and handclapping when he said he hoped the convention would endorse the proposal for American participation in the world court.

A moment later the delegates got on their feet again and cheered when Senator Harrison quoted a party precept from Grover Cleveland. "There was more applause when the senator added that what the country needed in the White House was not a 'syhynx' but a 'Paul Revere'."

The first long demonstration of the convention then began as Mr. Harrison went on to say that the nation wanted another man with the courage of a Jackson and the fighting qualities of Woodrow Wilson, and at the mention of Mr. Wilson's name delegates leaped from their chairs yelling their approbation.

Parade Was Started A parade around the hall was started by New Jersey which ripped up its state standard from its floor fastenings and started what turned out to be a howling march about the aisles in which eventually every state standard was drawn by the shouting delegates.

After a circuit about the hall, the New Jersey standard was held high in front of the speaker's stand by a group of delegates from the state from which Mr. Wilson was chosen for the presidency. The other standards paraded by while the band played. Delegates and galleries soon were singing tunes to which the American army marched under Woodrow Wilson as commander in chief. The delegates kept up a din that almost drowned out the band.

Convention officials made no effort to stay the demonstration and it was ten minutes before the state standards began to return to their places as the band struck up "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." Delegates joined in singing and Madame Case came out to the front of the platform and took charge of the demonstration. She sang a verse and asked the convention to join with her in repeating it.

Prima Donna Wrecked Speech

The famous old chorus swelled up to the roof of the Garden. When the song was over Senator Harrison pounded for order but the delegates kept up cheering for a minute longer. The senator resumed his speech after he had sorted out his notes, swept off the speaker's stand and scattered over the platform floor by a sweeping gesture by Madame Case in the midst of her singing.

But there were ever frequent references to the Wilson policies scattered through the speech and the convention interrupted to applaud. There was more cheering when the temporary chairman launched upon an attack on republican foreign policy. "Show this administration an oil well and they'll show you a foreign policy," he said and there was a howl of laughter and approbation.

"The democratic party offers no apologies for the foreign policies of Woodrow Wilson" was another line of the speech that got a cheer.

Appeal in Name of Dead

Senator Harrison closed with an appeal in the name of Jefferson, Jackson and Wilson to keep the democratic faith and carry the standard of the party to victory in November. Once again the delegates rose cheering. Again the band swung into "The Long, Long Trail" and the convention remained standing singing and shouting as the band leader went on to other war songs.

SCANDAL—
By Richard Henry Little in the Chicago Tribune.

Now listen, I want to give you a tip. I've got George Washington right on the hip.

Our country he tried to sell out flat and cold.

For a mere thousand pounds of bright British gold.

He nearly was caught, so he just passed the buck—

And Benedict Arnold was sure out of luck.

Now history says that one Aaron Burr

Killed young Alex Hamilton and is therefore a cur.

But old George Washington—yes, he was the one

Who took the young life of brave Hamilton.

Poor Ham was out there to fight in a duel.

When George just sneaked up so sly and so cruel.

Before Ham could raise his gun for a crack

Then he faded away, he had no sense of shame.

And poor Aaron Burr got all of the blame.

So above is untrue and not very good.

But if I didn't tell it, Mr. Vanderlip would.

And that isn't all, I know a lot more of things that you never have heard of before.

Just take Thomas Jefferson—why the big dub.

He used to hammer his wife with a club.

He founded the Democrats' party, it's said.

He started the Anti-Saloon League instead.

A, Lincoln—well, now I've got to speak freely.

Once tried to poison nice, kind Horace Greeley.

And one time old Abe went on a big souse.

And tried his gosh darnedest to burn the White House.

How that Stewell Jackson—there is a doubt.

And Barbara Fritchle came to snuff out.

She waved the old flag—and just in a breath.

Mr. Jackson jumped at her and choked her to death.

As for Robert E. Lee—well, all through his life

I happen to know he ate peas with his knife.

I'm not sure of this, but I've just got to do it.

I'm trying to beat Mr. Vanderlip to it.

GYROS SUPPLIED TWO TRUCKS FOR GIRL SCOUTS—

Miss Deets will supervise the loading of the two big trucks furnished by the Sterling Gyo Club to take the girls and their equipment to camp. One truck will carry the dozen girls and two or three of the councilors who will accompany them. The other truck will take the baggage and provisions.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY.
CANNING AND PRESERVING STRAWBERRIES.

Strawberries for canning or preserving or jamming should be perfectly ripe but not the least bit over-ripe.

So, sort strawberries carefully and use the perfect large berries for plain canning and preserving and the imperfect berries requiring cutting for old fashioned strawberry jam.

When washing berries do not pour water directly onto the fruit. Drop the berries into a big pan of cold water or into a deep colander. Set the colander in a larger pan of water to wash berries and when clean gently lift the colander from the water, letting the berries settle slowly together without any violence. Water softens delicate fruit and rough handling breaks the gossamer-like covering and allows the immediate escape of the juices.

The ideal way to can strawberries is by the cold pack method. The berries keep their shape and return their flavor much better than when canned by the open kettle method.

To Can Strawberries by the Cold Pack Method.

Pack perfect, well washed berries in sterilized cans, adjust tested rubbers and pour medium syrup to cover fruit. Half seal cans and put in hot water bath. The water must cover the jars by at least an inch. When the water begins to bubble begin to count the time for sterilization and sterilize quart jars 16 minutes. Remove from boiler, tighten covers and turn cans upside down where they will cool quickly but not in a draught. If a draught of cold air strikes a boiling can breakage may occur. When cold, store in a dark, cool, dry place.

Pack the fruit closely but do not mash or crush.

To sterilize cans for packing, wash cans in hot soap suds and rinse in scalding water. Cool and put in the boiler you will use for cooking the fruit. Fill boiler with cold water and bring to the boiling point. Boil ten minutes. Remove cans from boiler when needed for filling with fruit. This gives you your boiler of boiling water for processing and sterilizes your cans at the same time. The covers should be included.

Medium syrup is made by boiling 3 cups sugar and 2 cups water for five minutes or until the syrup is thick and clings to a spoon. Allow ¼ cup sugar for each quart can of fruit. Be sure to make enough syrup to fill all the cans. Extra syrup can be kept in a glass jar in a cold place until needed for the next batch of canning. Fill can to within ¼ inch from the top with the boiling syrup.

To half seal screw-top jar, tighten cover with thumb and little finger. To seal, screw down as tight as possible.

To half seal spring-top jar, fit on cover and adjust top ball. To seal, clamp ball cover jar.

Sunshine Strawberry Preserves.

Select large, perfect berries. Hull and wash. Drain. Weigh fruit. Use pound for pound of berries and sugar. Put a layer of berries in a smooth porcelain preserving kettle, cover with sugar and add another layer of fruit. Continue layer for layer until all is used. Let stand over night. In the morning put on a slow fire and bring to the boiling point. Remove scum and let boil gently for five minutes. Turn out onto big platters. Cover with glass or mosquito netting and put on a table in the sun outdoors or in a sunny window. Cook until the syrup is thick, stirring occasionally. If a glass is used it must be removed and dried frequently. Twelve hours of direct hot sunshine will cook the fruit and syrup to the desired thickness and deliciousness. Pour into sterilized pint glass jars and seal. If a mosquito netting is used the air helps thicken the syrup, but unless you live in a dustless community the glass covering should be used.

Old Fashioned Strawberry Jam.
Hull and wash berries. Imperfect ones that have been cut can be used for this jam. Weigh fruit and for every four pounds of fruit use three pounds of sugar. Put fruit and sugar in preserving kettle and mash fruit with a wooden potato masher. Cook, stirring constantly until the fruit is soft and the juice is sirupy. The jam will not be stiff because strawberries will not jelly. The juice should be clear and quite sparkling when the jam is done. It will take about 25 minutes, although the length of time will vary some according to the juiciness of the fruit. Pour into sterilized jars and seal. Too long cooking will make the jam rather strong flavored.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

Meat for Broiling.
Meat for broiling should be of the best quality obtainable, otherwise another method of cooking is preferable.

Hothouse Tomatoes.
A delicious salad is made by peeling and slicing hothouse tomatoes on a flat dish, then covering them with finely chopped lettuce and celery and mayonnaise dressing.

Luncheon Dish.
For a luncheon dish sprinkle grated ham and grated cheese over slices of toast and set in the oven until the cheese has had an opportunity to melt.

Clarify First.
When use drippings for pastry they must be thoroughly clarified first.

Fruit Combinations.
Combinations of fruit make most delicious and nourishing desserts and are not difficult to prepare. Pineapple and cherries or strawberries or bananas and oranges are much better for summer consumption than pastries.

Serving Gooseberries.
Boil gooseberries in sugar until are tender, then straining through a sieve and when they are cold serve with whipped cream flavored with lemon. This is recommended for a breakfast fruit dish as well as for dessert.

Use Hot Fat.
There is no use in trying to fry anything successfully in fat which is lukewarm, or, in fact, under the boiling point.

DOINGS OF THE SUNSHINE CLASS—
The West Group of the Sunshine Class of St. Paul's Lutheran church will meet Thursday with Mrs. Mary Hinds, 325 Logan avenue, with Mrs. Grace Gerdes as assistant hostess. Statewide Plan for Beautification Urged
By Associated Press Leased Wire
Peoria, Ill., June 24.—A statewide program for beautification of Illinois, her hard roads, public buildings and hotels, will be advanced at Joliet Saturday evening upon the arrival there of the Art Extension committee which is touring northern Illinois this week. At a breakfast here today, Lorado Taft, Chicago sculptor, chairman of the committee, said a movement has been started on this trip "which none of us can see the end of." There are sixty-seven members of the committee representing 37 communities, taking the trip. Today the committee plans to go to Princeton and then to Rock Island before nightfall. REHEARSALS FOR PAGEANT BEGUN: DIRECTOR HERE
Edward K. Russell is Chief Director of Coming Pageant.
Rehearsals for the Pageant of Abraham Lincoln began this afternoon when the young people who are to appear in the groups of dancers met in the K. of C. hall for their first instruction under the direction of Edward K. Russell of New York. It is fortunate the first rehearsals are under the direction of Mr. Russell, who is the chief director of the pageant and who usually does the work in the large cities, and whose experience in this work has extended over many years, said a member of the committee. In a letter to Major Earle, Mr. Russell states that he has changed Mr. Russell's assignment from Detroit to Dixon in order that Dixon, because of its location in the section that knew Lincoln in life, may be assured of the best direction that the company is able to furnish. Last night there was a meeting of the group leaders in the K. of C. hall, at which the work was outlined and the system under which the pageant will be given explained. This was attended by all of the out-of-town group leaders with the exception of the Franklin Grove group. To Notify Participants During the day all who have been selected to take part in the pageant will be notified to report at the K. of C. hall at 7:30, but in case of inability on the part of the committee to get in touch with everyone, all who have been selected and those who would care to take a part will please be at the hall at the above mentioned time. Owing to the large number in the cast and the distraction caused by outside people in affairs of this kind, that all who are not taking an active part in the rehearsals will be asked not to visit the hall during rehearsal times. Thanks to the co-operation of various lodges and organizations the work of the casting committee has been rendered much easier than it would otherwise have been and the selection of nearly every principal character has been made. One of the greatest spectacles that has ever been given in this section of the country and one that will draw exceptionally large crowds of people from a large territory to see it is assured, in ground occupied and in numbers of people taking part the Pageant of Abraham Lincoln in as large or larger than any of the big three ring circuses that are now in existence.

OTHER ANIMALS CAN'T DO IT.

Fish in the underground rivers are blind. They don't need eyes. So nature took them away. Put the same fish in waters above-ground. They'd need eyes. And nature, after generations, would develop the eyes.

Life adapts itself to its environment. The giraffe's long neck was developed by craning and stretching to nibble the most tender leaves, at the tops of trees.

The rhinoceros developed its thick hide to protect itself from poisonous jungle snakes and insects.

It all comes by the extremely slow process of evolution. But life—vegetable and animal—is constantly adapting itself to its environment.

Man, having intelligence, reverses this old evolutionary law that has prevailed for millions of years. Man's body still adapts itself to environment. But man also adapts his environment to fit himself.

Where the giraffe grew a long neck to get the leaves at the tops of trees, man if he couldn't climb would use a ladder.

Instead of growing thick skin to protect ourselves against rattlesnakes, we wear heavy boots.

If environment doesn't please us, we change it. Instead of fleeing from the barren desert, we irrigate water into the desert and make it bloom.

Birds evolved from fish which, wanting to fly, developed their fins into wings. Man invents the airplane.

A few other forms of animal life have the power, though meager, to change their environments to suit themselves and their needs.

The beaver, for instance, instead of building underwater, makes a dam that backs up the water around a house constructed originally mostly on dry land.

But man has, to a phenomenal extent, the power to adapt his environment to himself instead of vice versa. We emphasize this power because it is the main reason why we should never yield to discouragement.

If you don't like your lot in life, you have the power to change it. Hard work and self-denial may be necessary, but every man within certain bounds is master of his own destiny.

Where he is limited in the matter of change, it is chiefly due to restrictions created by humanity at large. The race can have almost any kind of environment it wants—if it is willing to pay the price.

SAM.

If we all chipped in $200 apiece we could pay off the entire national debt. Every one hasn't the $200, however. So the debt remains and the public, by taxes, pays interest on the debt the same as if the debt money were a bank loan.

National debt now is around 21,348 million dollars, after deducting cash in the treasury. The total has been reduced over 4000 million dollars since its peak in 1919. Salvaged war materials account for considerable of the cut. From now on, the debt probably will drop less slowly. The public will have less money for taxes.

DRAGGING OUT THE FOURTH.

Noise and hilarious celebration on the Fourth of July is expected and accepted. But when the Fourth of July starts on the fourth of June and lasts a month it becomes too much of a good thing.

If there is no adequate city ordinance to prohibit the shooting of firecrackers and torpedoes on the city streets, there should be one, and it should be enforced. Probably the surest method is to prohibit the sale of such articles and so kill the thing at its source.

Hoodlums are ranging the streets, firing off their explosives wherever they think it will annoy someone. They even throw lighted cannon crackers into automobiles, menacing eye-sight and even life. There can be no justification for such promiscuous and long drawn-out use of these dangerous and highly annoying explosives. It ought to be stopped.

A BAD TEETH PARADE.

Addressing an audience of dentists in one of the large cities, a school official says there ought to be a public parade of children in the public schools who have defective teeth. The size of the procession, he said, would astonish everybody. In examining many thousand pupils, it has been found that only 53 percent of the boys and 65 percent of the girls have "teeth that might be rated as good."

And why do the girls have better teeth than the boys? The official thinks it is "because they are less afraid of the dentist's chair."

It would make an impressive and not altogether pleasant picture—the parade suggested, with thousands of boys and girls marching, presumably with mouths open, to show their bad teeth. Something might be accomplished that way, in dentally backward communities.

The idea of the parade was to impress upon the dentists the need of greater attention to the teeth of the young. Dentists, however, are usually alert enough on that subject. It is fathers and mothers who need to be impressed.

PINCHED.

A lot of small-time actors, not making as much money as they need, are selling goods as a sideline—clothing, groceries, etc.

In Argentina, teachers have classes only half the day, and hold outside jobs the rest of the time.

Possibly we are approaching such a high standard of "efficiency" that most of us will have to hold down two jobs to get enough to eat.

WEATHER.

We are creatures of the weather. Small wonder we talk about it so much. Retailers blame the late spring for the business recession. Laggard weather held back the sales of spring clothing and other seasonal commodities. That put a lot of makers out of work. The weather was like a dam, backing up dull business into many channels.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 14—A TRIP TO TURKEY

"Well, well, well!" said a new voice.

"All aboard for Turkey!" called Johnny Jump Up.

"Turkey!" cried Nick, sitting up in bed suddenly. "Is it Thanksgiving time?"

"Are you joking, Johnny?" asked Nancy, sitting up in her little bed, too.

"Of course, I'm not joking," said Johnny Jump Up. "I'm not talking about the same kind of turkey that you are, I'm talking about a far country called Turkey. It's away across the sea and the Turks live there. Would you like to go?"

"Oh, yes!" said the Twins quickly. "Then scramble into your clothes, and here are the magic shoes," said Johnny.

And in about two shakes of a Dickey bird's tail the three tiny travelers were out in the magic garden, where a lilac bush grew.

Sitting astride one of the blossoms was a little Turkish fairy, bobbing his head at them in a friendly greeting.

"Hello, Nancy and Nick," he called. "I've brought you some tickets for your journey! The Fairy Queen sent me a radio message across the sea to bring you some tickets. That's why I'm here."

"Thank you," said Nancy. "Is Turkey a nice place?"

"Of course it is," said the tiny Turk. "Lilacs came from Turkey in the first place and the gardens are full of them. Just wait until you see what real lilacs are!"

"Well, well, well!" said a new voice. "Are you going to stand here all night talking? That's the way some people read their letters. They wonder and wonder what's inside—who it's from and what it says 'n' everything—and all they've got to do is to open it and find out. What's the use of talking when all you've got to do is to go and see for yourselves?"

Everybody laughed, for it was only Johnny Titmouse, the little bird, and his heart was kinder than his tongue.

"We're coming Tommy!" said Nick.

"Here are the tickets," said the tiny Turk.

So after Tommy Titmouse had punched them with his little sharp bill, the Twins and Johnny Jump Up got on his back and away he flew.

"Why, it's different from any country we have ever seen," said Nancy when they got to Turkey. "What queer shapes the houses are!"

"They look like turnips upside down," said Nick.

"This is the city that's so hard to spell," said Johnny Jump Up. "All the boys and girls in school miss it in spelling. It is called Constantinople. It is a beautiful city, though, but very very old."

The Twins could see down into the gardens from where they sat. Many of them had high walls around them, shut off from the street, and they were full of flowers. The air was sweet with lilacs just as the tiny Turk had said.

Next the titmouse took them out to the country where things were growing, fields of tobacco and corn and orchards of mulberry trees where silk worms were feeding.

"That's all," said the little bird. "Let's go home!"

So back they went to the moonlit garden. The Twins thanked Johnny Jump Up, the tiny Turk and the titmouse and climbing the rose vine, took off their magic shoes and tumbled into bed.

LETTER FROM RUTH ELLING-TON TO WALTER BURKE

DEAR MAN:

I am sending this letter to your office in New York because I know that you will stay a short time there before you come on to me.

You say to me, Walter, that I must have faith and trust in you. Have I not been doing something that I love to do. You know that I set myself up in business, but I don't know that I ever told you or any one else—that Leslie Prescott gave me the money to do this, and has been my silent partner all through the venture.

It has been eminently successful, and I have almost come to feel that work is the panacea for every ill. It gives one a chance to bring many contacts into one's life—at least the kind of work I am doing. You meet people, they amuse, they interest, or they anger you. I, at least, am never indifferent to them. And it gives you something to think about besides yourself.

One grows so self-centered and so self-pitying when one lives much alone. Until I went into this business, Walter, I thought I was one of the most miserable women in the world; and now I know I'm not.

Of course, I know now that you loved me then, but you did not tell me so until after I found out that Harry Ellington was betraying me every day of his life. You have been betrayed not least. I think if you did, I should want to die; and yet, dear, I'm afraid I'm afraid to marry you. My married life was so exceedingly unhappy that I have sometimes wondered if love can be wound about and confined in marriage bonds.

I rather distrust myself as a wife, Walter. Harry Ellington seemed to

How to build up your Weight

TO be under weight often proves low fighting-power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve-power, minus red-cells in your blood, minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red-cells, you begin to become plus. That's why S. S. S. since 1826, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, a plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, firmer, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. More red-blood-cells! S. S. S. will build them.

S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

world; and now I know I'm not.

I expect you are saying: "What is Ruth writing all this to me at this time for?" I, myself, don't know, dear, except that I don't want to give up this little shop, and I know you like to travel, you like your wife to be extremely brilliant, to meet and entertain your friends—in fact, you want her to be just wife. I wonder if I can do this? I am fonder of you, Walter, than of any other man I know. It would break my heart not to have the feeling of your interest and care of me. In fact, I'm one of those naughty little girls that want to eat my cake and have it, too.

Until I see you, dear, am going to sign myself as Children make constipation a habit—relieve them with Kellogg's Bran Children punish themselves terribly by ignoring nature's demands. They bring constipation upon themselves. They invite the many other diseases which can be traced to constipation. Immediate steps should be taken to rid them and keep them free from this disease.

It takes ALL bran to be 100 percent effective. That's what Kellogg's is—ALL bran. That is why doctors everywhere recommend Kellogg's. That is why Kellogg's Bran carries a money-back guarantee to bring permanent relief, if eaten regularly, in the most chronic cases of constipation. That is why Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, has brought glorious, glowing health to thousands—because it is ALL bran.

No matter how long one has suffered with constipation, Kellogg's Bran will bring permanent relief IF EATEN EVERY DAY—at least two tablespoonfuls—in chronic cases, with every meal.

Kellogg's Bran is delicious. It has a crisp, nut-like flavor that simply delights the taste. It is a wonderful surprise if one has been used to ordinary, unpalatable bran.

There are many ways to serve Kellogg's Bran. Eat it with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over other cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. Look for the recipes on every package and try it in muffins, bread, griddle cakes, etc.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is made in Battle Creek and is sold by grocers everywhere. It is served by the leading hotels and clubs.

HORTICULTURALISTS IN BIG PICNIC AT GEO. POWELL FARM

Feature of Gathering Was Address By Farm Advisor Buck.

The beautiful home of George and Jessie Powell of Sterling on the Lincoln Highway was the scene of the annual June picnic of the Rock River Valley Horticultural society on Friday. Nothing daunted by the severe wind and rain storm of the early morning, members and friends turned out in large numbers.

The cafeteria picnic dinner was served on the lawn, big bowls of delicious strawberries being one of the principal features. After the dinner was disposed of a short program was carried out in the house. Miss Madeline Wade entertained the company with a piano solo, which was well rendered and which received hearty applause. Following this the minutes of the February meeting were read by the secretary and accepted. Mrs. A. W. Barwick gave a reading selected from "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and responded to an encore with another short selection. The president then next introduced Glenn Buck assistant farm advisor of Whiteside county whose address was the principal feature of the program.

Consumption Big Item
Mr. Buck's first remarks were to the effect that the most important point in horticultural industry is the consumption of the horticultural products and that without adequate consumption, production would not be profitable. It was his opinion that the consumption end of the business had been well demonstrated during the picnic dinner which had just been disposed of.

Mr. Buck has just recently attended a farm advisors' conference of several days duration at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois and he gave the Rock River Horticulturalists an outline of the work the department of horticulture is doing in the way of experimental work in disease control, methods of culture, pruning and comparative tests of varieties of fruit trees, the standpoint of resistance to disease hardiness, etc. Many of these results are the very latest to be completed and have not yet been published in bulletin form. A few of the most important findings and results in various lines follow:

Carries 54 Projects
The University department of horticulture is carrying on 42 major projects and 12 minor projects, using over 3500 plants and shrubs which they are studying from standpoint of disease control, cultural methods, etc. The horticultural plots and orchards over 133 acres including 53 orchards of various fruits, over 200 varieties of trees and bushes beside fruit trees being grown, these being hybrids, new varieties produced by crossing to secure varieties best adapted to certain localities and certain conditions.

The department has recently erected a large, modern laboratory and cold storage plant for investigation and for instruction of students in horticulture. It contains cider presses, vinegar manufacturing machinery, canning factory, large cold storage rooms, etc. The fruit used is produced in the demonstration orchards of the university.

Mr. Buck described three of the principal projects upon which results are now available and gave figures from each as follows:

Fertilizer Projects
These consist of comparison of various methods of cultivation of apple orchards combined with fertilizers and without fertilizers, these methods being sod mulch, lawn grass, legume, cover crop and no cultivation. The most profitable method has proved to be the use of soy beans as a cover crop and the cover crop in connection with nitrogen and phosphorus fertilizers gave somewhat better results than legumes alone, though the difference was not striking. Practically the same results were secured with peaches, raspberries, currants, gooseberries and grapes as with apples.

Pruning and Fertilizing
Experiments with bearing apple trees in sod but which are now receiving clean cultivation. It has been shown that pruning has more effect on clean cultivation than in sod. In experiments with grapes, 610 plants were used, and they were pruned by four different methods: the single cane and double cane, Kniffen system, the fan system and one other. The single and Kniffen system proved to be most profitable.

Disease and Insect Resistance
In this experiment several well known varieties of small fruits previously thought to be among the best have proven to be not so good. These results are not all ready for publication.

Several experiments have been made with variety tests of fruit trees to compare their comparative resistance to cold, disease, insect injury, etc. In this 100 varieties of apples, 60 varieties of peaches, 75 varieties of plums, 30 varieties of cherries and other fruits were used. As a result of severe cold weather Japanese and European varieties of plums gave practically no bloom, native plums gave fairly good bloom, and some hybrid principally the Hansen hybrids, showed 60 per cent of normal bloom. Kieffer and Garber pears have proven most resistant to blight.

A comparison of lime, sulphur and oil emulsion sprays as dormant sprays showed that the oil emulsions gave much better results than lime sulphur and that six strong sprays of lime sulphur applied early decreased the yield. Late dormant spray with lime sulphur seriously injured the set of fruit. Casein was shown to be the best spreader for uses in connection with spray and made it possible to save one-third in the amount of spray material used.

Experiments in the use of various wrappers for apples to prevent scalding in storage show that scalding can be almost completely prevented by wrapping the apples in paraffined oil paper. Mr. Black at the conclusion of his talk answered several questions and received hearty appreciation of the information he had given his audience, many of whom realized for the first time the amount of work being done by the department of horticulture in all lines of investigation and demonstration.

Miss Luella Powers read a clipping, one of Edgar Guest's poems, "Patient Nature" which was appropriate for a program of this kind.

Upon motion of Charles Lawton, Mr. Powell and Miss Powell were given a vote of thanks for their hospitality in entertaining the society on this occasion. The society adjourned to meet at the usual time in September.

—L. T. Powers, Secretary.

DAWES CARRIES ON DEAD SON'S WORK AMONG CHICAGO'S DOWN AND OUT HOBO'S PARADISE

BY GEORGE BRITT
NEA Service Writer

Chicago—For 15 cents a West Madison street hobo may get a bath, night shirt, the fumigation of his clothes and a clean bed in the Rufus F. Dawes Hotel.

Yet if Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, founder of the hotel, can be made to mention it at all, he refers to it only as an investment.

The hotel is probably the best illustration of the friendly, unostentatious human service which is a hobby of the Republican vice presidential nominee—best known to the world as financier, soldier, budget director, untangler of European crises and volcanic shouter of "Hell and Maria."

It is a memorial to the general's only son, Rufus Fearing Dawes, who was drowned in 1912, while 21 years old, just before his senior year at Princeton.

No Preaching
Rufus Dawes, as a youngster, had gone to the poor districts of the West Side and given time and money in relieving want. When he worked one summer vacation in an engineering camp in South Dakota he used a large part of his earnings to give baskets to the poor. In his spirit the hotel is carrying on.

There is no offering of advice or preaching. Simply clean, cheerful comfort. Patrons are treated as paying customers are in any other business.

General Dawes also has built a similar Rufus Dawes Hotel for men in Boston, and the Mary Dawes Hotel, for women, named for his mother, in Chicago.

General Dawes has not institutionalized his impulses, however. He likes to put the personal touch into his deeds.

Befriended "Bell Boy"

One of the best examples of individual helpfulness in Francis J. Kilkenny, now prospering as an investment broker on LaSalle street. Thirty years ago Kilkenny was a bell boy and cloak room attendant at the Union League Club. Dawes noticed him as an alert, honest, promising lad, and Kilkenny was attracted to the vigorous, friendly young club member.

Dawes took Kilkenny over first to work in the McKinley-for-president headquarters in 1896. Then he took him to Washington when he was made comptroller of the currency as his confidential secretary.

During the war Kilkenny was a lieutenant and aid to General Dawes. Later he was assistant to the director of the budget.

Kilkenny recalls how Dawes as comptroller of the currency refused to approve the dismissal of an old G. A. R. colonel from a messengership in the office, but instead gave personal aid to the old man's domestic needs. And he tells of Dawes' intercession with the president for a federal pension, proved later to have been falsely accused.

THE RUFUS F. DAWES HOTEL FOR DESTITUTE MEN, IN INSET, RUFUS FEARING DAWES, IN WHOM MEMORY HIS FATHER, BRIG. GEN. CHARLES G. DAWES, ERECTED IT.

Slept Near Wheel
Dawes as comptroller of the currency had two habits when going to see the president which amounted almost to a ritual. Fastidiously neat at all times, he yet insisted upon a special washing of his hands and combing of his hair before going to the executive's office. It was a consideration for the position, even though the president was his personal friend.

And he always walked a certain route to the White House to pass Mary, an aged beggar, and drop a quarter into her cup. It brought him luck, he said.

Going overseas during the war, Dawes as a lieutenant colonel was entitled to a main deck cabin. But he had a cot set up in the wheelhouse at the stern, and slept there. It was near the stern gun of the vessel's armament and, if emergency arose, he would be near the action.

At night, during the voyage, Dawes would go down to the second saloons, occupied by non-commissioned officers, and play the piano for the enlisted men of his regiment.

In Paris during the war when General Dawes met a wounded soldier he saluted first. The wounds, he estimated, outranked the star on his shoulders.

The largest emigration of Germans is to South America.

New Treatment For Swollen Glands

People who have enlarged glands ought to know that by freely applying Emerald Oil daily the gland can be brought to a head and all the germs and poisonous secretions discharged and destroyed.

Furthermore the opening will heal surely and speedily and without leaving an unsightly scar. People who desire this treatment should secure a two-ounce original bottle of Emerald Oil (full strength) and use as directed. It is a very concentrated preparation and a small quantity lasts a long time. It is also used to reduce swollen veins and dissolves goitre. —Adv.

Final Report on the Mound Bridge

Constructed by Ogle and Lee Counties

To the Boards of Supervisors, Ogle and Lee Counties.

Gentlemen:

We would make final report on the construction of the Mound Bridge, Town of Palmyra, Lee County, situated within 80 rods of the county line, and therefore a joint responsibility of your two counties.

As detailed in the Mound Bridge Reports, 1923, the counties of Lee and Ogle had duly entered into contract with Paul McGinnis, Esq., of the Town of Palmyra, to construct the Mound Bridge, to connect the two counties for a distance of 24 rods, at the cost of $24,000 and to make the necessary earth approaches at the cost of 45c per cu. yd., the total cost for said approach work not to exceed the sum of $24,000.

We would report that the said bridge and its approaches have now been satisfactorily completed.

We find the amount of the bill to be $13,439.

The total bill of Mr. McGinnis thus becomes:

Constructing the Mound $624.00

Approach to same, 415 cu. yds. @ 45c 186.75

Leaving balance on report at Dec. meeting $61.60

Toward the construction of the Mound Bridge a donation of $100 was made by M. H. School, owner of adjacent land. This donation reduces the above bill by $100.00.

Leaving due Mr. McGinnis $149.15

Bridge Committee of the two counties, all bills in this bridge construction were to be paid by counties "share and share alike" we find that Mr. McGinnis, for each of the two counties, 32 of $149.15, or $74,575, which we recommend be paid.

Respectfully submitted, this 10th day of June, 1924.

Senators Won Couple

The margins of the Senators' two victories over the Yankees were 5-3 and 4-2. Megridge bested Jones in the opener and Shawkey spoiled Hoyt's pitching duel with Zachary when he relieved the former Brooklyn school boy in the second game. Hoyt had resigned in favor of a pinch hitter.

Connie Mack's charges pushed the Red Sox down the totem pole with 3-0 and 6-3 scores. Bryan Harris and George Murray squared in a pitchers' duel in the first encounter in which the latter was slightly outgeneraled. "Lefty" Heimach's experience was too much for Ruffing, one of Fohl's recruits, in the closing tilt.

The Giants defeated Brooklyn, 12-5, their ninth straight victory and their tenth win out of 12 starts against the Robins this season. Wilbur Cooper outpitched Adolfo Luque, and Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati, 4-2.

In a twin bill featured by home runs Philadelphia scored a two-run win over Boston by scores of 7-3 and 11-7. Joe Schultz, recently acquired by the Phillies from the Reds, lined out two circuit drives, one with the bases full. Cy Williams, Stengel and Couch also hit four base blows.

Harvey McClellan, Sox infielder, was in uniform yesterday during practice. He has been out of the game due to illness.

Burns Sent to Beaumont
Catcher Burns was sent to the Beaumont club by the White Sox "Kettle" Wirtz, former Cub and Beaumont player, joined the Sox during their St. Louis stay.

The Cubs play an exhibition game at South Bend, Indiana, today.

The St. Louis Cardinals will play an exhibition game at Sterling, Illinois, and then proceed to Cincinnati. Forest Cady, former manager of the Boston Braves, is now manager of the Danville Three Eye League club, succeeding Eddie Wright, who resigned.

Johnny Mostil aided the White Sox in scoring their three runs in the first game, which they lost to Cleveland, 4-3, while every Indian but Myatt hit safely in the same contest. In the second game, Myatt made his first hit of the season off a left hand pitcher, when he pushed a single to right off Cevengros.

Latonia, Ky., June 24.—Western candidates for the Latonia Derby next Saturday were given their preliminary at Latonia yesterday and Black Gold, the most highly regarded of all, was the one found wanting. The horse that won three derbies this year for Mrs. R. M. Hoots, of Oklahoma, finished last in a field of seven starters in a mile and an eighth dash.

Chulhowee, the winner ran the distance in 1:59.45. Jockey J. D. Mooney said that when he applied the whip to keep the Hoots' colt among the contenders, Black Gold refused to extend himself.

GET WEIGHT IN

If you have ever seen a prize fighter hit his opponent, you will notice that he hits first and the weight of everything he has follows. That is the sort of a hit you want in golf, but there is a great difference— prize-fighting is a tense, tight, fighting sport; golf is a relaxed, leisurely and rhythmic one. Those who tell you that golf is a fighting game with gritted teeth and tense muscles are leading you far astray. You are not fighting your opponent; you are measuring your spirits the sure you can feel that you are playing good golf and not a rocky fighting game.

The five words I would avoid in my idea of general hitting are push, rush, force, drag and lunge. The five words I favor in the idea of general hitting are snap, crack, flick, fling or slap.

The latter five should all be done carefully, especially in a wind. They will all prevent the ball floating over to one side or another. Let the swing go along easily until you feel the club contact. Keep poking the shots firmly, cleanly hit into the imaginary direction line. Remember the ball will wait for the proper stroke, and try not to be a strong man with your hot. When the clubhead meets the ball, do not quite there but keep on going through without losing rhythm. For the breeze you must get down to the ball. You must hit just as enough under the center of the ball to feel the clubhead, not yourself, hit it. The hands at the time of hitting the ball are even with the vertical line. You should not feel stiff at the time of contact, but as if you are gathering the shot, which should be a firm hit. You should have an unmistakable sense of solid connection when the wooden face meets the ball. Busting, jamming, or flopping the clubhead into the imaginary direction line may better express the sort of shots you ought to make. If you are not getting the clubhead on the ball well, relax a little and when you swing down, relax just a little more.

Take stock of your feet and legs; see they in a good position for your swing? The clubhead should be on the ball before the follow through.

The LAND OF FORGOTTEN MEN

by Edison Marshall

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Peter Newhall, Augusta, Ga., sees to Alaska, after being told by Ivan Ishmin, Russian aristocrat, he had drowned. Paul Sarichef, Ishmin's secretary, Ishmin and Peter's wife, Dorothy, had urged him to go to South America. He joins Big Chris Larson in response to a distress signal at sea, giving Larson his sea jacket. Their launch hits rocks. Larson's body is buried as Newhall's. Peter, rescued, finds injuries have completely changed his appearance. Dorothy and Ishmin go to Alaska to return Peter's body. They do not recognize Peter in their head guide. A storm strands them at the grave. "Change name," a message from the sea. Dorothy believes to be from Peter, telling her to accept Ishmin's marriage proposal. They are married by a native priest. Sarichef appears. Dorothy renounces the marriage and calls Ishmin her husband-murderer.

Now go on with the story. The slant of his smoky, shadowed eyes seemed, in her imagination, accentuated; she felt that the dread spirit of sleeping passion that was the soul of this strange, far-western night had passed to him, and was coming to life within him. The cultured gentleman, the distinguished, gracious social favorite that she had known in the South had passed away, in the fierce passion of this desperate hour, and only the Mongol was left, the ravisher out of Asia.

"I dare do anything—that is my right," he told her simply, no longer careful to lower his voice. "Dorothy, you are my wife. You are mine, and these kisses are mine. What I want, I will take."

"But I told you I renounced that marriage!" Ivan smiled, as if in perfect self-confidence. "You can't renounce it! A marriage lasts forever—from our point of view." She knew that he was speaking not alone of his peculiar tribe and country, but of the whole East. "You are my wife, legally and definitely; and never for a moment believe that this is a Western marriage. Please don't confuse me with a Westerner, or think that we will live by a Western code. I fancy you will find that we of the East look on womanhood a little differently from the men to whom you are accustomed, but you will get used to it in time. I pleaded with you at first, which is not in the East; but I don't intend to plead with you any more. You are a Mongol's wife, and that means you will give what he asks, think what he says for you to think, and do what he says to do. In time you will learn it is the best way to let your husband decide all these hard matters. Don't let there be any more talk of renunciation—of what you will do and what you will not do. He paused to steady his vibrant, tremulous voice. "Dorothy, we of the East do not worship the beauty and the rapture we get out of womanhood. Such is woman's place—to give us that. When a woman marries a man of my breed, he owns her—body and soul."

A sudden, upward-flaring of the cane fire showed the strange scene in vivid detail. It showed Ivan, his thin, almost beautiful face strikingly pale and drawn from the devastation of his passions, his white hands trembling with restrained power, standing beside the fire confronting the girl; it showed Dorothy, cowering from him, her beautiful hands clasped as her breast, her red mouth did not take offense. He hurried, fawning, into the circle of light.

"My bride here is a little unruly," Ivan said easily. "You know how it is, sometimes, Pavlov. She's just a little nervous and rebellious—and I might need a very small amount of help."

Pavlov bowed slightly; but he did not speak. The lines seemed to deepen and strengthen on his dusky face as he waited for his orders; otherwise he gave no sign.

"We're going to change our plans,"

Pavlov. Ivan went on. "We're not going to the Outside, after all. I want you to be the head guide from now on, and I want you to guide us to one of the Esquimo villages—avoiding carefully all white settlements. This lady and I are going to lose ourselves among the natives until she learns to think differently somewhat to going, and I'm afraid that for a few days, until she gets the right point of view, we'll have to treat her like a prisoner. I might need you, from time to time, to help guard."

Pavlov nodded, but he showed no disrespect to his master by even the slightest glimmer of a leering smile. There was no help for Dorothy here, then, wholly as a matter of course, just as Ivan had known he would take it; and Dorothy glimpsed again the great universe that separates the races.

"Of course I can depend on you," Ivan asked.

"Sure. She's your wife. What you say goes."

"That's all for now. She might even attempt to escape from my tent tonight, but I don't think I'll have your help."

The man moved back to his dugout. "You'll find the other breed's point of view just the same, Dorothy," he explained. "If you hadn't married me he'd be glad to fight for you. Now you're my wife he'll obey me. Of course Sarichef is my faithful servant—in everything. Are you convinced?"

There was no help here. Likely even Peter would admit the Mongol's ownership of her, body and soul. A single dry sob rasped at her throat, and she turned as if about to dart away in flight into the night and the storm. But even this doubtful mercy was not vouchsafed her. Ivan moved toward her, a motion fast as the leap of a tiger, yet giving no image of great exertion, and his arms pinned hers to her side. Then, with no show of effort, he lifted her bodily and started into the tent.

The guide stepped into the circle of firelight. His rifle rested in the hollow of his arm. His rugged, weather-beaten face was stark white.

"Put her down," he said slowly.

Ivan turned in infinite scorn, as he set the girl on her feet. He met the man's quiet, unfaltering gaze. He saw, dimly, that the hand that held the weapon was steady as a vice of iron.

"You're taking a dangerous risk, Peter," he said evenly. "Put up that gun and close your eyes, if you don't like what you see, and most of all don't start anything that you can't carry through. I'll do what I like with this woman. She is my wife."

Pete's quiet gaze did not waver. The ruddy light poured over him. "She is not your wife," he said clearly.

Ivan opened his lips, and his arms were limp at his side. Dorothy uttered one long-drawn gasp that whispered strangely in the silence. For her the veil still hid the truth, but it was being swept away like mist before the blast of the gale. She felt just at the eve of some profound climax.

Ivan fought away an inexplicable sense of dismay, a vague, creepy terror that had penetrated to his heart. "Are you a fool?" he asked.

"You saw me marry her. The marriage was legal."

Pete shook his head. "It was not legal. It couldn't be legal. She is Peter Newhall's wife!"

"But Peter Newhall is dead!" Ivan's voice was shrill and strange, not his own. A light grew on Dorothy's stricken face until it was a white flame, surpassing belief.

"He was dead to the living world, but he has risen," was the answer. "I am Peter Newhall."

CHAPTER XX Reunited

The simple words, so moving and mysterious in the half-light, lifted Dorothy to the skies, out of the storm and the night, the despair and the terror never to descend again; yet she knew no particular sense of amazement other than that of her own blindness in failing to guess Peter's identity long since.

Correct Clothes To Meet The Obligation Of Every Occasion

Winging Into Favor

In style, as in everything else, "more water glideth by the mill than the miller wots of," and in the span of time we all part with pet prejudices. For example, many men used to imagine that it required a certain cast of features to wear the wing collar and bow-knot tie becomingly. You had to have a long face, lean cheeks and a spare chin. In truth, the wing collar looks well on nearly every type of man if he selects the right shape, that is, if he makes sure that the collar is in well-balanced proportion to his face.

The reason why a woman finds choosing clothes no task is because she delights in frequent changes which keep her interest in her appearance sharp and bright.

Gold Found in Clay Near Decatur is Pure

By Associated Press Leased Wire.
Decatur, Ill.—Gold, found in small quantities in the clay and sand banks west of this city, by Johannes Schu-macher, artist and modeler, has been pronounced chemically pure, according to a statement from Prof. E. R.
Darling, of the chemistry department at James Millikin University, Decatur.

Schumacher, who is promoting a clay modeling establishment, first noticed the yellow particles in the clay of Stevens creek, near here, while he was searching for a better clay location. With the aid of chemists, it was found that the particles were gold, but in very small quantities. According to Schumacher, he has discovered a method by which he is able to separate the gold from the clay and sand, thus making the deposits of some value. The gold was noticed at a depth of twenty feet, in a high grade deposit of clay. There was also found in the bed a minute aluminum deposit, which made the gold separation process more difficult.

A statement issued by the geology department of the University of Illinois declares that the soil peculiarities of Illinois are such that gold, in large quantities to be worth any amount, will be found anywhere in the state. The report states that some gold may exist, but that it would be impracticable to attempt to utilize it with any profit.

The grade of clay discovered in this locality, however, is said to be a find of great importance.

MOTHER TELLS HOW DAUGHTER GOT HEALTH

Mrs. Jacoby Is Grateful To Tanlac—Gives Details of Case.

Miss Mildred Jacoby, beautiful young daughter of Mrs. Charles Jacoby, 1107 South 7th Street, Burlington, Iowa, is another of youthful age to whom the Tanlac treatment has proved invaluable. Speaking of her daughter's experience, recently, Mrs.
Jacoby said:

"Three years ago, when Mildred was only ten, she became so run-down as to cause me continual worry and anxiety. She seemed to care for nothing to eat and often was troubled with indigestion and restless sleep. She was pale and underweight, took very little interest in play, or amusements with other children, and her school work was a burden to her.

"Tanlac gave her just the help she needed and four bottles were all that was necessary to build her up to splendid health. Now Mildred eats and sleeps fine, has a ruddy complexion and is making wonderful progress at school. In fact, she is altogether unlike the run-down, puny little girl she was before taking Tanlac. Judging from the results in her case Tanlac is a medicine of wonderful merit."

gists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.
